SACRIFICED TWO LIVES.

Knoxville, Tenn., July 7-Night tea is the deadly decoction which it is alleged was used by Mrs. Agnes Fleming to kill her husband, John Fleming, so that she might be married to Howard Jenkins. Jenkins, it is alleged, also used the same means to poison his beautiful young wife, in order that he might meet the plans of Mrs. Fleming.

The scene of the affair is Roane county, the story naving come to this city in a press dispatch.

Three weeks ago both John Fleming and Mrs. Howard Jenkins died under suspicious circumstances, but no action was taken until yesterday, when Mrs. Fleming, who is connected with a family prominent throughout East Tennessee, was married to Jenkins.

The warrants for the arrests of the pair were issued at the instance of the Alatives of the two dead persons.

THREE IN THE PARTY KILLED MANY MISDEMEANORS TRIED

Winnipeg, Man., July 7.—The Rev. cah, has been chosen as one of the five in regular session, with a three weeks' Dr. Ferlies, a Church of England ored girl charged with killing her clergyman, arrived from York Factory, Northwest British Territory, and brings authentic information of the fate of Explorer Andre and his and discharged from custody by Judge companions.

> York, a party of Eskimos, under the leadership of "Old Huskie," saw the instance of County Attorney Graves, Andre balloon alight on a plain of who did not think from the start that snow in that vicinity, which is almost two miles north of Fort Churchill. Three men emerged from the balloon, and some of "Huskie's" people approached them out of curiosity.

As they did so one of Andre's com panions fired off a gun. This is a signal to uncivilized natives for battle. It is regarded as a challenge, and almost instantly the natives fell upon the three explorers and massacred them. Everything pertaining to their outfit was carried away to the homes of the natives on the north borders of the arctic region.

"Old Huskie" himself gave this information to Ralph Alstine, agent for the Hudson Bay company, and the story, after being investigated by Dr. Ferlies, was told by him today. He says that there is little room for doubt, as frequent reports have since come of the strange implements which the north natives have in their possession, the telescope being particularly described.

The Hudson Bay company has recently offered a reward for the recovery of any portion of the outfit belonging to Andre, and though natives have gone on the search for them, they have never returned, believing, as Dr. Ferlies says, that they will in some way be punished, for they now understand that it was not an attack upon them, but an accident by which the gun was discharged that precipitated the massacre.

Means bad air, and whether it comes from the low lands and marshes of the country, or the filthy sewers and drain pipes of the cities and towns, its effect upon the human system is the same.

These atmospheric poisons are breathed into the lungs and taken up by the blood, and the foundation of some long, debilitating illness is laid. Chills and fever, chronic dyspepsia, torpid and enlarged liver, kidney troubles, faundice and biliousness are frequently due to that invisible foe, Malaria. Noxious gases and unhealthy matter collect in the system because the liver and kidneys fail to act, and are poured into the blood current until it becomes so polluted and sluggish that the poisons literally break through the skin, and carbuncles, boils, abscesses, ulcers and various eruptions of an indolent character appear, depleting the system, and threatening life itself.

The germs and poisons that so oppress and weaken the body and destroy the life-giving properties of the blood, rendering it thin and watery, must be overcome and carried out of the system before the patient can hope to get rid of Malaria and its effects.

SOUTH SIDE NOTES.

The south side is steadily improvmorning from Tennessee river with a ing. Among the many improvements we might mention are the Sea Coast Mineral Co., on the old Clements Nasaville, and left at noon today for plant; also the Lack Singletree Co. is preparing one part of the same plant for occupancy with their extensive day night at 12 o'clock en route to also expects soon to have the advantages of a brand new grist mill, to be built and operated by Victor Wells and Co., who are practical mill men, formerly of Graves county, Ky., but now residents of this city. In addition to these and other improvements of like character, the residence cot-tages—those of Esq. Sheehan's are nearing completion; A. Shelton and J. P. Withers have their's under fair headway.

Health on this side is fairly good. Neil Green is convalescing, after a spell of jaundice. Master Adrian McCain is improving after an attack of malaria. Mrs. Rosa Reid and children have returned home, after several days visit to her sister, Mrs. McCain, on Bridge street.

Mrs. McClure of Farley street, after a several days' sojourn in the country, arrived home this week.

The glorious Fourth was more gentories and public works were closed down for the day.

NEW STORE KEEPER.

VILLE, SUCCEEDS MR. DOUG-LAS NASH.

Mr. U. H. Clark, chief clerk in the general foreman's office at Louisville, has been named as the successor of Mr. Douglas Nash, the local Illinois Central storekeeper, resigned. His resignation, previously published, will be effective about the 15th, and Mr. Clark will be here to take charge on that date.

JUMPED OUT

Mrs N. B. Gardner Painfully Hurt in an Accident.

Street Car Frightened the Horse and Caused it to Run Away.

Mrs. Napoleon Gardner, wife of the well known furniture dealer, painfully injured in a runaway night near the Sleeth drug store, corner Ninth and Broadway, and her baby was slightly bruised in the accident.

Mr. and Mrs. Gardner and child were driving home to Washington street and when Ninth and Broadway was reached a street car came out of the switch. The headlight frightened the horse and as it shied and started to run Mrs. Gardner, holding the child jumped out. The wheels of the ve hicle passed over her body and as a re-sult she is suffering from a badly bruised right breast and an ugly cut on Bills re-discounted.

COMPROMISE EFFECTED

MRS HELEN HECHT BUYS OUT SIG SOMMERS AND ENDS CASE.

A compromise was this morning effected in the suit of Helen Hecht against Sigmund Sommers, brought by Attorneys Lightfoot and Yonts several days ago to enforce a dissolution of partnership, the appointment of a receiver for the stock of goods and an equal distribution of the proceeds of the sale.

The plaintiff in the action charged that Sommers had entered into a contract with her and that a partnership was effected, the firm name being "Hecht and Sommers, wholesle cloth ing." She alleged that Sommers claimed she took too much from the assets at the end of the year and alleges that Sommers took too much also and that they could not agree as to the method of running the business.

The suit was compromised by Mrs. Hecht buying out Sommers for $6, 500, and continuing the business in her own name. The suit had never been brought to trial.

Raymond, the 20-months-old son of Mr. John Wooten, died this afternoon on North Thirteenth street.

When prominent men realize the in jurious effects of coffee and the change city at noon today after a visit to rel- in health that Postum can bring, they are glad to lend their testimony for the benefit of others.

Mr. C. C. Wright, superintendent of public schools in North Carolina. says: My mother, since her early child hood, was an inveterate coffee drinker and had been troubled with her heart for a number of years, and complained of that 'weak all over' feeling and sick stomach.

"Some time ago I was making an official visit to a distant part of the country, and took dinner with one of the merchants of the place. I noticed a somewhat peculiar flavor of the He replied that it was Postum Food coffee. I was so pleased with it, that after the meal was over I bought a package to carry home with me, and coffee and used Postum entirely.

"I had really been at times very anxious concerning my mother's con dition, but we noticed that after us ing Postum for a short time she felt so much better than she had prior to its use, and had little trouble with her neart and no sick stomach; that the neadactes were not so frequent and her general condition much improved. #### IS GOING TO LEAVE HIM

A sharp featured woman called or County Judge Lightfoot Saturday and after sitting around and frowning furtively for five or ten minutes became impatient and walked up and said:

"Jedge, I got a old man at my house I want tuken care uv."

"Well, madam," replied the judge who had evidently seen the caller be fore, "I am sorry, but fiscal court declined to do anything for him."

"It did, did it?" she echoed menso ingly. "Wal, now I want ter know what it done that for?"

"Because, as I understand it," suvely explained the judge, "he is resident of Marshall county, and is drawing a pension from there now."

"Aint doin' no sech thing, now!" she exclaimed. "I aint able to take keer uv thet man, and thet's all there is about it. I got a baby, and it's as much as I ken do to take keer of it.

"What relation is this old man to you?" asked the judge.

"Nuthin' but a half uncle." "How long has he been here?"

"Sence Christmas."

"Where did be come from?" "From Marshall county."

"Well, where did he live there?" "He lived in the pore house."

"Oh yes, I begin to see," smiled the court. "He heard about how well we take care of people in this county and thought he would cross over, did he? Well, madam, we can do notning for you."

"Well, jedge," cyan't you holp me take keer uv thet old man the rest of the week? Then I'll send him home.'

"Home," repeated the judge in mock surprise. "I thought you said he had no home. Where is his home?" "Enywhere you say it is, jedge, I reckon," she snapped, seeing that she was tripped. "Well, where did you mean you would send him?" "Back whur his people lives in Marshall," she replied.

"No madam," concluded the judge, we have no funds for such purposes. We can do nothing at all for you. This county can't even help you take care of him the rest of the week."

Then the woman got mad. ing her finger at the judge, she declared: "I'm goin' ter bring thet old man right up here Monday an' leave him, and you ken do whut you please with him. I aint goin' to be bothered with him no longer." And she left.

At last accounts the woman hadn't brought her half uncle around, and Judge Lightfoot does not know what he would do should the indigent emigrant be unloaded at his office in such a manner. He says he has heard of a good many ways to make the county take care of paupers, but he never before heard of one being left in the county judge's office like a stray dog. He sincerely hopes this method of disposing of the poor will not become popular during his term of office.

THE RELIGION OF INDIA.

The earliest source for the religion India is the nymns of the Rig Veda, the date of which is now fixed at about 1000 B. C. In one of these hymns we encounter as the creator Parusha, who is simply a "magnified man." to this conception under the influence of which Perusba becomes the "all in all," and is identified with the universe, with what has been and what shall be. All gods, animals and castes are parts of him. The moon is his mind, the sun his eye, from his mouth sprang Indra and Agni, and from his breath Vayu; space from his navel, heaven from his head and the earth from his feet. This emanation theory, when freed from its primitive elements, becomes pantheism pure and simple. In accord with this view the source of creative activity is carried back in other hymns to "desire." We read in Vedic literature that "desire is the seed of the mind. "-Harper's.

"You will give us time," he said at last. "My daughter is very young—she is scarce of an age to marry."
"She shall have a month to choose," said Young, rising from his seat. "At the end of that time she shall give her answer."

He was passing through the door when he turned, with flushed face and flashing eyes. "It were better for you, John Ferrier," he thundered, "that you and she were now lying blanched skele-tons upon the Sierra Blanco than that you should put your weak wills against the orders of the holy four!"

With a threatening gesture of his hand he turned from the door, and Fer-rier heard his heavy steps crunching along the shingly path.

He was still standing with his elbows upon his knees, considering how he should broach the matter to his daughshould broach the matter to his daughter, when a soft hand was laid upon his, and looking up he saw her standing beside him. One glance at the pale, frightened face showed him that she had heard what had passed.

"I could not help it," she said in answer to his look. "His voice rang through the house. Oh, father, father, what shall we do?"

"Don't ye scare yerself." he answer.

what shall we do?"
"Don't ye scare yerself," he answered drawing her to him and passing his broad, rough hand caressingly over her chestnut hair. "We'll fix it up somehow or another. Ye don't find yer fancy kind o' lessening for this chan do yes?"

yer fancy kind o' lessening for this chap, do ye?'

A sob and a squeeze of his hand was her only answer.

"No, o' course not. I shouldn't care to hear ye say ye did. He's a likely lad, and he's a Christian, which is more than these folk here, in spite o' all their praying and preaching. There's a party starting for Nevada tomorrow, and I'll manage to send him a message, letting him know the hole we are in. If I know him know the hole we are in. If I know anything o' that young man, he'll be back here with a speed that would whip electro-thermorph. electro-telegraphs."

Lucy laughed through her tears at her father's description.

"When he comes, he will advise us for the best. But it is for you that I am frightened, dear. One hears—one hears such dreadful stories about those who oppose the prophet. Something terrible always happens to them."

"But we haven't opposed him yet," her father answered. "It will be tim to look out for squalls when we do. We have a clear month before us. At the end of that I guess we had best shin out of Utah."
"Leave Utah?"

"That's about the size of it."
"But the farm?"

We will raise as much as we can in money and let the rest go. To tell the truth, Lucy, it isn't the first time I have thought of doing it. I don't care about knuckling under to any man as these folk do to their daried prophet. I'm a freedom, American and it's all sometimes to the second of the second o folk do to their darined prophet. I'm a freeborn American, and it's all new to me. Guess I'm too old to learn. If he comes browsing about this farm, he might chance to run up against a charge buckshot traveling in the opposite there's no danger at all."

John Ferrier uttered these consoling sonn retrier utered these consoning remarks in a very confident tone, but she could not help observing that he paid unusual care to the fastening of the doors that night, and that he carefully cleaned and loaded the rusty old shot-gun which hung upon the wall of his hedroom.

CHAPTER IV.

On the morning which followed his interview with the Mormon prophet John Ferrier went in to Salt Lake City, and having tound his acquaintance, who was bound for the Nevada mountains, he intrustee him with his message to Jefferson Hc.e. In it he told the young man of the imminent danger which threatened them and how necessary it was that he should return. Having done thus, he felt easier in his mind and re-turned home with a lighter heart.

As he approached his farm he was sur-prised to see a horse bitched to each of the posts of the gate. Still more surthe posts of the gate. Still more sur-prised was he, on entering, to find two young men in possession of his sitting room. One, with a long, pale face, was leaning back in the rocking chair, with his feet cocked up upon the stove. The other, a bull necked youth, with coarse, bloated features, was standing in front bloated features, was standing in front of the window with his hands in his pockets, whistling a popular hymn. Both of them nodded to Ferrier as he entered, and the one in the rocking chair commenced the conversation. 'Maybe you don't know ns.'' he said. "Inis here is the son of Eider Dreuber, and I'm Joseph Stangerson, who trav-eled with you in the desert when the Lord stretched out his hand and gathguessed who his visitors were.

"We have come," continued Stangerson, "at the advice of our fathers, to son, as the advice of our fathers, to solicit the hand of your daughter for whichever of us may seem good to you and to her. As I have but four wives and Brother Drebber here has seven, it appears to me that my claim is the stronger one."

"Nay, nay, Brother Stangerson," cried the other. "The question is not how many wives we have, but how many we can keep. My father has now given over his mills to me, and I am the richer man."

'But my prospects are better,' said the other warmly, I "When the Lord re-moves my father, I shall have his tan-ning yard and his leather factory. Then Lam your elder and am higher in the

'It will be for the maiden to decide,"

"It will be for the maiden to decide," rejoined young Drebber, smirking at his own reflection in the glass. "We will leave it all to her decision."

During this dialogue John Ferrier had stood fuming in the doorway, hardly able to keep his riding whip from the backs of his two visitors.

"Look here," he said at last, striding up to them, "when my daughter summons ye, ye can come, but until then I don't want to see yer faces again."

The two young Mormons stared at him in amazement. In their eyes this competition between them for the maiden's hand was the highest of honors,

"The hand of the Lord shall be heavy upon you!" cried young Drebber. "He will arise and smite you!"
"Then I'll start the smiting!" exclaimed Ferrier furiously and would have rushed up stairs for his gun had not Lucy seized him by the arm and restrained him. Before he could escape from her the clatter of horses' hoofs told him that they were beyond his told him that they were beyond his

It was indeed high time that one capable of giving advice and help should come to the aid of the sturdy old farmer and his adopted daughter. In the whole history of the settlement there had never been such a case of rank disobedience to the authority of the elders. If minor errors were pun-ished so steroly what would be the fatished so steroly, what would be the fate of this arch rebel? Ferrier knew that his wealth and position would be of no avail to him. Others as well known and as rich as himself had been spirited away before now and their goods given over to the church. He was a brave man, but he trembled at the vague, shadowy terrors which hung over him. a firm lip, but this suspense was un-nerving. He concealed his fears from his daughter, however, and affected to make light of the whole matter, though she, with the keen eye of love, saw plainly that he was ill at ease. He expected that he would receive some message or remonstrance from Young as to his conduct, and he was not mistaken, though it came in an un-looked for manner. Upon rising next merning he found, to his surprise, a small square of paper pinned on to the coverlet of his bed just over his chest. On it was printed in bold, straggling amendment, and then"-The dash was more fear inspiring than any threat could have been. How this warning came into his room puzzled John Ferrier sorely, for his serv-auts sleut in an outhouse, and the doors and windows had all been secured.

crumpled the paper up and said nothit to his daughter, but the incident struth a chill into his heart. The 29 days we evidently the balance of the mon which Young had promised. What strength or courage could avail against an enemy armed with such mysterious powers? The hand which fastened that pin might have struck him to the heart, and he could never have known who had slain him.

Still more shaken was he next morning. They had sat down to their breakfast when Lucy, with a cry of surprise, pointed upward. In the center of the ceiling was scrawled, with a burned stick apparently, the number 28. To his ceiling was scrawled, with a burned stick apparently, the number 28. To his daughter it was unintelligible, and he did not enlighten her. That night he sat up with his gun and kept watch and ward. He saw and he heard nothing, and yet in the morning a great 27 had been painted upon the outside of his door.

Thus day followed day, and as sure as morning came he found that his unseen suemies had kept their register and had marked up in some conspicuous position how many days were still left to him out of the month of grace. Sometimes the fatal numbers appeared upon the walls sometimes mon the flows occasion. walls, sometimes upon the floors; occa-sionally they were on small placards stuck upon the garden gate or the rail-ings. With all his vigilance John Ferrier could not discover whence the daily warnings proceeded. A horr which was almost superstitious came upon him at the sight of them. He be-came haggard and restless, and his eyes had the troubled look of some haunted creature. He had but one hope in life now, and that was for the arrival of the young hunter from Nevada.

Twenty had changed to 15, and 15 to 10, but there was no news of the absentee. One by one the numbers dwindled, and still there came no sign of him. Whenever a horseman clattered down the road or a driver shouted at his team, the old farmer hurried to the gate, thinking that help had arrived at last. At last, when he saw 5 give way to 4, and that again to 3, he lost heart and abandoned all hope of escape. Single handed, and with his limited knowledge of the mountains which surrounded edge of the mountains which surrounded the settlement, he knew that he was powerless. The more frequented roads were strictly watched and guarded, and ne could pass along them without an der from the council. Turn which way he would, there appeared to be no avoiding the blow which hung over him. Yet the old man never wavered in his resolution to part with life itself before he consented to what he regarded as his daughter's dishonor.

He was sitting alone one evening pon-dering deeply over his troubles and searching vainly for some way out of searching value for some way out of them. That morning had shown the figure 2 upon the wall of his house, and the next day would be the last of the allotted time. What was to happen then? All manner of vague and terrible fancies filled his imagination. And his daugh-ter—what was to become of her after he ter-what was to become of her after he was gone? Was there no escape from the invisible network which was drawn all round them? He sank his head upon the table and sobbed at the thought of his own impotence.

What was that? In the silence he heard a gentle scratching sound—low, but very distinct, in the quiet of the night. It came from the door of the house. Ferrier crept into the hall and listened intently. There was a pause for a few moments, and then the low, insidious sound was repeated. Some was evidently tapping very gently upon one of the panels of the door. Was it some midnight assassin who had come to carry out the murderous order of the secret tribunal? Or was it some agent who was marking up that the last day of grace had arrived? John Ferrier felt that instant death would be better than the suspense which took his nerves and chilled his heart. Springing forward, he drew the bolt and threw the door

Outside all was calm and quiet. The night was fine, and the stars were twinkling brightly overhead. The little front garden lay before the farmer's eyes, bounded by the fence and gate, but neither there nor on the road was any human being to be seen. With a sigh of relief Ferrier looked to right and to left, until happening to glance straight down at his own feet he saw to his astonishment a man lying flat upon his face upon the ground, with arms and legs all

So unnerved was he at the sight that he leaned up against the wall with his hand to his thorat to stifle his inclination to call out. His first thought was that the prostrate figure was that of some wounded or dying man, but as he watched it he saw it writhe along the ground and into the hall with the rapidity and noiselessness of a serpent. Once within the house the man sprang to his feet, closed the door and revealed to the astonished farmer the fierce face and resolute expression of Jefferson

What are we to do?"

"Tomorrow is your last day, and un-less you act tonight you are lost. I have a mule and two horses waiting in the Eagle ravine. How much money five in notes."

"That will do. I have as much more to add to it. We must push for Carson City through the mountains. You had best wake Lucy. It is as well that the servants do not sleep in the house."

While Ferrier was absent preparing his daughter for the approaching journey Jefferson Hope packed all the eata-bles that he could find into a small par-cel and filled a stoneware jar with wa-ter, for he knew by experience that the mountain wells were few and far be-tween. He had hardly completed his arrangements before the farmer return-ed, with his daughter, all descend and ed, with his daughter all dressed and ready for a start. The greeting between the lovers was warm, but brief, for minates were precious, and there was much

"We must make our start at once," said Jefferson Hope, speaking in a low but resolute voice, like one who realizes the greatness of the peril, but has steeled his heart to meet it. "The front and back entrances are watched, but with cantion we may get away through the side window and across the fields. Once on the road we are only two miles from on the road we are only two miles from the ravine where the horses are waiting. By daybreak we should be half way through the mountains."
"What if we are stopped?" asked

Forrier.

Ferrier.

Hope slapped the revolver butt which protruded from the front of his tunic.

"If they are too many for us, we shall take two or three of them with us," he said, with a sinister smile.

The lights inside the house had all been extinguished, and from the darkened window Ferrier peered over the fields which had been his own, and which he was now about to abandon. which he was now about to abandon forever. He had long nerved himself to forever. He had long nerved himself to the sacrifice, however, and the thought of the honor and happiness of his daugh-ter outweighed any regret at his ruined fortunes. All looked so peaceful and happy—the rustling trees and the broad, stlent stretch of grain land—that it was difficult to realize that the spirit of murder lurked through it all. Yet the white face and set expression of the young hunter showed that in his ap-proach to the house he had seen enough to satisfy him upon that head.

Ferrier carried the bag of gold and notes. Jefferson Hope had the scanty notes. Jefferson Hope had the scanty provisions and water, while Lucy had a small bundle containing a few of her more valued possessions. Opening the window very slowly and carefully, they waited until a dark cloud had some-what obscured the night, and then one by one passed through into the little by one passed through into the little garden. With bated breath and crouch-ing figures they stumbled across it and gained the shelter of the hedge, which they skirted until they came to the gap which opened into the cornfield. They had just reached this point when they young man seized his two companions and dragged them down into the shad-ow, where they lay silent and trem-

It was as well that his prairie training had given Jefferson Hope the ears of a lynx. He and his friends had hardly crouched down before the melancholy within a few yards of them, which was immediately answered by another hoot at a small distance. At the same moment a vague shadowy figure emerged from the gap for which they had been making and uttered the plantive signal. cry agaif., on which a second man appeared out of the obscurity.

"Tomorrow at midnight," said the

"It is well," returned the other. "Shall I tell Brother Drebber?"

"Shall I tell Brother Drebber?"

"Pass it on to him and from him to the others. Nine to seven."

"Seven to five," repeated the other, and the two figures flitted away in different directions. Their concluding words had evidently been some form of sign and countersign. The instant that. words had evidently been some form or sign and countersign. The instant that their footsteps had died away in the distance Jefferson Hope sprang to his feet, and helping his companions through the gap led the way across the fields at full speed, supporting and half carrying the girl when her strength ap-
